TIMOTHY LATULIPPE, MSC.

Director, UK/EEA

Timothy is a data forensic examiner, investigative technologist, and expert witness that works with law firms and corporate clients that face arbitration, litigation, internal investigation, and all manners of data-driven disputes.

Throughout his career, Tim has been able to provide evidence in very public matters, where most go unreported owed to confidentiality. Mostly recently, Tim provided expert report evidence in the NGN v Johnny Depp matter in London High Court in summer of 2020.

Prior to joining iDS, Tim was based in similarly expert-driven firms, but through M&A activity was exposed to some of the larger MSP environments.

Tim, a proud fifth-generation Vermonter, has called Phoenix, San Diego, and San Francisco home throughout his journey. An avid reader, traveler, and coffee connoisseur, he also enjoys cycling, cooking, playing guitar, and sharing laughter. Tim is married to a Parisian native, and together they have a daughter.

Tim is a graduate of Champlain College, where he received his Master's Degree in Digital Forensics Management and his Bachelor of Science Degree in Computer & Digital Forensics. Timothy is proficient in French.

"I don't like to simply offer solutions; I like to solve problems, which fits very nicely with the iDS mantra. I like to take a very consultative and collaborative approach to engagements and I much prefer our clients have excellent outcomes and return with confidence. I also work very closely with partner, Dan Rupprecht whom completes the picture with large-scale legal and eDiscovery experience, as I do not believe technology consulting alone provides the best experience."
